Welcome to my profile!

Hey! My name is Kevin, and I primarily focus on cultivating Nepenthes, Pinguicula, and hardy carnivorous plants. However, I also keep a few species from other genera in my collection.

I place great value on making my own analyses and conclusions understandable and reproducible, so that the cultivation methods I describe here can be repeated by anyone using the same means.

By now, I would consider myself relatively experienced in the cultivation of carnivorous plants. Even so, I am very dedicated and spend a great deal of time acquiring new knowledge and making sure not to spread half-knowledge. Articles written by me are therefore always supported by advice and feedback from more experienced colleagues.

I founded Carnipedia.org together with other like-minded people, and I would be proud if this site develops into what we all hope for: The best source of information on carnivorous plant cultivation in the world!
